The Vietnamese Boat People Memorial Monument is a historical memento of the tragic plight of the two million Vietnamese-Boat-People-Refugees who risked their lives to flee communist Vietnam in the late 1970s and early 1980s:

The Monument's aspiration is

- To commemorate half a million of Vietnamese refugees who perished within the turbulent high seas or dark deep jungles while escaping the tyranny of communism
- To honour the UNHCR in spearheading the call to save hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese refugees from crowded in humane camps across the South East Asian seas
- To show gratitude to Canada and Canadians who had welcomed and sheltered fifty thousands of Vietnamese Boat People refugees across in Canada
- To connect generations of Vietnamese Canadians to their origins and their Vietnamese Canadian ancestors' sacrifices, and perilous Journey to Freedom
